

REWARDING EXCELLENCE SINCE 1969

Who are we?

The International Wine and Spirit Competition was established in 1969 by Anton Massel, a wine chemist. The Club Oenologique, as it was first called was created to reward excellence in wine production the industry. Massel led the way with the rigorous analysis of both chemical and sensory components of the products entered for judging.

Over 50 years working with the spirits industry, the IWSC has refined its judging processes to reflect the changing industry landscape. Today, the competition not only recognises excellence in spirits, but also in individuals, with awards such as Outstanding Achievement in Scotch Whisky, Spirit Communicator of the Year and Spirits Buying Team of the Year, as well as now judging spirits with their most iconic mixers. IWSC has remained constant: to reward excellence, to recognise quality, and to provide the consumer with authoritative recommendations.

The IWSC is part of The Conversion Group, a global investment company with businesses in Europe, North America and Asia. Staging over 200 events annually, in addition to wines and spirits, our businesses span the culinary, arts and creative industries sectors.

What sets the IWSC apart?

- Proven track record, and the only spirit competition with 50 years' experience.
- A dynamic year-round operation, with judging days spread across the year.
- A custom-built cellar ensures your spirits are stored in the absolute optimum conditions before judging.
- In-house service from taking delivery of spirits to judging results, all carried out by our year-round dedicated team.
- Spirits are expertly sorted into their tasting categories by a WSET certified educator with over 20 years' experience in the wine and spirit industry.
- Spirits are served in pre-poured, numbered glasses to guarantee anonymity. This avoids the possibility of judges being influenced by the shape or weight of the bottle.
- Our experts assess a maximum of 65 spirits through the course of the day. This allows the judges plenty of time to taste each spirit and avoid palate fatigue.
- Each judging panel is made up of an optimum mix of experts from a diverse range of trade backgrounds. Key areas of the industry are represented; on-trade, off-trade, and specialist writers and critics. This diversity ensures greater objectivity of the results.
- Any faulty or out of condition spirits undergo official technical analysis by Campden BRI. The results are shared confidentially with the entrants free of charge.

Who are the IWSC judges?

IWSC panels are made up of key international spirit influencers and decision makers, led by a Panel Chair and overseen by a Spirit Judging Committee

Arthur Nägele (1)

Following his education in hospitality management, he was invited to become a member of the Wädenswil Sensory Evaluation Group in Switzerland, where he trained as a spirits judge. Nägele now works as an independent spirits educator and consultant, and is a founding member of the Spirituosenakademie, which provides training for the wine and spirits industries.

Charles Maxwell (2)

Director of The Gin Guild, a body set up by the Worshipful Co in 2012 to promote premium distilled gins, and which in 2014 presented him the first Lifetime Achievement Award for services to the gin industry. He personally has worked in the Spirit and Wine industry for some 43 years, the last 22 at the helm of Thames Distillers.

David Stewart (3)

David has dedicated 55 years of his life to the Scotch whisky industry. His pioneering techniques have had a profound impact on the production methods used today. He has developed a number of award-winning whiskies enjoyed and loved by drinkers all over the world. In 2016, David was presented with an MBE by Her Majesty The Queen.

David T Smith (4)

An independent spirits writer and consultant who specialises in gin. He has written a variety of books on gin and gin drinks, and has reviewed over 400 gins on his website, SummerFruitCup.com.

Eddie Ludlow (5)

Eddie has been part of the whisky industry since his Ardbeg and Glenmorangie ambassadorial duties started in 2005. He is a Keeper of the Quaich, a Freeman of the City of London, through the Worshipful Company of Distillers, and is finishing his first book, 'Whisky - A Tasting Course', due to be published by DK in September 2019.

Joel Harrison (6)

An award-winning drinks writer and commentator, who specialises in whisky and fine spirits. He is a Keeper of the Quaich, the highest honour in Scotch whisky, a member of Compagnie des Mousquetaires d'Armagnac in the world of brandy, and a 'Rectifier' in the Gin Guild, as well as a WSET trained educator.

Maureen Robinson (7)

In the whisky industry for 42 years now, she originally started her career with Distillers Company Ltd. Over the years, she has been involved in many innovation projects across the various Diageo Brands and is currently heavily involved in Diageo's Prestige Programme including the Johnnie Walker Ghost & Rare series.

Richard Paterson (8)

Also known as the Nose, Master Blender at Whyte & Mackay Group for over fifty years and one of the most respected figures in the Scotch Whisky Industry.

Stephen Beal (9)

He was the senior brand educator for the whisky portfolio of Diageo North America for over 15 years. He has served since 2000 as an international spirits judge, broadcast presenter, spirits journalist and as a master accreditation educator with the United States Bartenders Guild.

The 3 steps to winning an IWSC medal

We believe a spirit competition is an exercise in sound judgment far more than it is an exercise in mathematics. Panel discussions are encouraged before the medal is awarded.

Step 1:

Spirits are expertly sorted into categories and flights and tasted by type, origin and age. The spirits are flighted on a case-by-case basis, either in a group of similar products, or as a standalone.

Step 2:

Spirits are judged blind and served in numbered glasses. The spirits are first tasted and scored by the judges individually within the context of the spirits' style. At the end of each flight, the Chair Judge encourages discussion within the judges and confirm the medals awarded, Bronze, Silver and Gold. If a consensus is not reached, the Spirits Judging Committee will step in and make a final judgement.

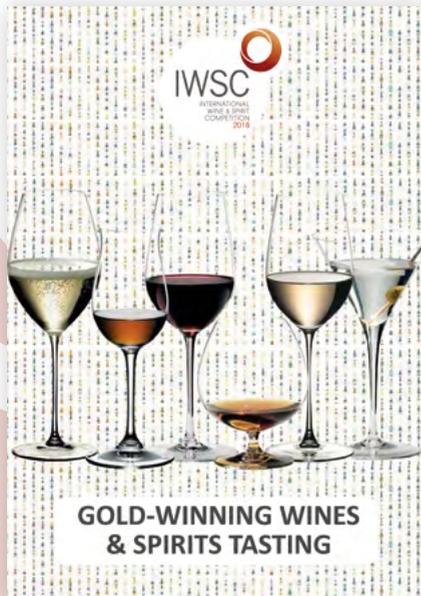

Step 3:

When there are numerous outstanding examples in a category, the Gold medals are expertly sorted into categories and flights and then re-tasted by the Spirits Judging Committee to compete for the ultimate accolade of Trophy Winner.

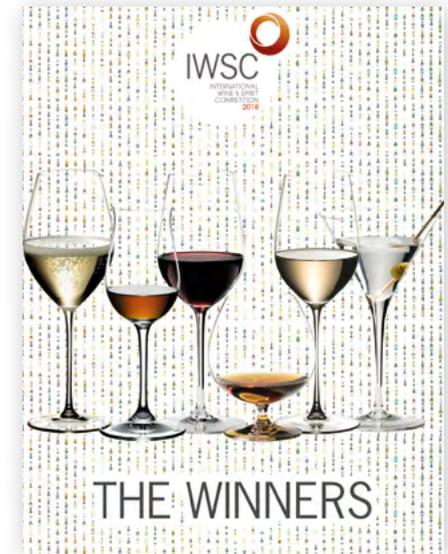

How can IWSC help to promote your brand?

IWSC works hard to promote and raise the profile of your winning wines around the world

- Trophy-winning spirits announced at the annual IWSC Banquet. Held at the prestigious Guildhall in London, this brings together 500 elite industry people.
- Your Gold winning spirits tasted by 500 of the UK's leading importers, retailers and critics.
- Dedicated social media campaigns ensure winners are publicised to our global network of followers all year round.
- Winners featured on our website and promoted via social media.
- A dedicated PR agency to promote winners' successes to the global media throughout the year.
- Winners are showcased in the IWSC result magazine distributed to over 10000 trade subscribers.

- A tasting of IWSC Winners is held at Vintners Hall every year in conjunction with the Worshipful Company of Distillers with over 200 people attending to taste the best spirits in the world.
- Work with partners to promote competition winners to consumers.
- Free marketing tool-kit, to assist in promoting your win (including free low-res medal artwork).
- Official IWSC medal stickers to ensure differentiation on a crowded retail shelf.
- Results will be presented to key buyers with the objective of linking buyer and producer.
- A selection of the winning spirits will be showcased in our consumer magazine, Club Oenologique.
- Medal winning wines highlighted on key retailers such as Amazon, Vivino, Indy Market, Wine Searcher, Ocado, Waitrose.
